

Translation—The second step of protein synthesis. A protein is built based on a gene (a segment of DNA which codes for a protein). The process takes place on a ribosome (either free-floating or attached to the surface of the rough endoplasmic reticulum).

